Nawkaw Corporation invited to speak during PACE 2008

Nawkaw Corporation President and CEO, Russell Gray, was a guest speaker on concrete coloring at the 2008 Painting and Coatings Expo in Los Angeles.

Watkinsville, GA – February 21, 2008 – The Painting and Coatings Expo, PACE 2008, merged the paint and architectural coatings industries into one conference and trade show expo this year. The event was held in Los Angeles, California from January 27th through January 30th at the LA Convention Center. Industry experts from around the globe were invited to submit a technical paper in 2007 to help introduce new coatings technology or to submit a project that may have utilized unique resources and creative industry insights that could be developed into an agenda for the conference schedule.

Speakers were given a 30-minute window to present their information to their peers in a speech/presentation combination. Gray touched on the fact that the exterior surfaces of the hotel had been constructed of exposed river rock aggregate consolidated concrete walls. This often left gaps of uneven areas where the river rocks weren't evenly distributed. Initially, the concrete walls were cleaned and surface repairs were made. Where the walls were void of the river rock aggregate, templates were created to replicate the river rock pattern in the concrete. The custom colors were achieved utilizing Nawkaw's proprietary masonry stain, NWRT-91, which also contains water-repellent properties.

The paint and architectural coatings industry was well represented this year with both manufacturers and suppliers attending the conference. Russell Gray, as owner of Nawkaw Corporation, developed the company's proprietary system of staining masonry. Over the last 20 years, the company has grown into a global business with locations in Australia, Canada, South Korea and the US. Gray is internationally known as an industry expert on masonry stain and is often asked to speak about previous Nawkaw projects and products.
